Too many entry level candidates are not prepared to successfully perform in the initial interview process. The interview is used to assess both the attitudinal and background information on the candidate. The consequence of a failed interview can result in a missed fire service career. Understand the skills and attributes that employers seek.

This class is an opportunity to properly prepare yourself to understand, organize and practice to present your skills, knowledge, and abilities in a positive manner.

First responders are prepared professionals. First responder candidates cannot afford to be unprepared. Become a prepared candidate.
